

Long-term Day-Use Visitor Management

For 107 years, Rocky Mountain National Park has been a place of inspiration, reflection, wonder, history, and wilderness adventure. Park visitors across the United States and the world continue to visit Rocky Mountain National Park to discover a wide variety of experiences found only in this incredible place.

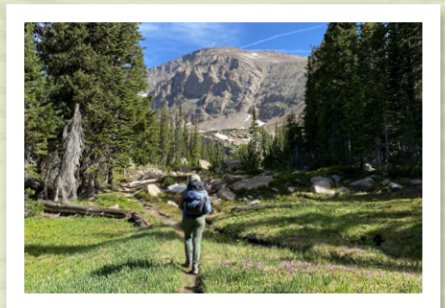

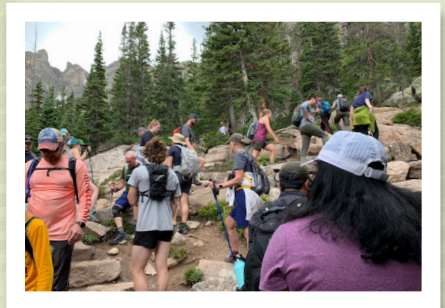

Do you have ideas on how we can protect the park's fundamental resources and values and provide great visitor experiences for future generations? We want to hear from you! In summer 2021, we invited you to join us to envision the long-term future of day-use visitor access at Rocky Mountain National Park. Your feedback was instrumental in helping the planning team develop the preliminary strategies that we are now ready to share with you.

How to get involved:

We encourage you to visit the park's website (www.nps.gov/romo/getinvolved/day-use-visitor-access-strategy.htm) to learn more about these long-term visitor use preliminary strategies and other project information.

Between December 12, 2022, and February 1, 2023, we are most interested in hearing from you about the following:

- Based on your desired experiences and protection of the natural and cultural resources at Rocky Mountain National Park, which of the ideas (or combination of ideas) do you think best achieve the purpose of the visitor management plan?
- Are there other ideas or changes to current ideas that should be considered and analyzed that are not already presented?

To share your ideas, comments, and questions and learn more about the project, please visit:
http://parkplanning.nps.gov/ROMO_DUVAS

