Comment Period Extension Great River Road Historic Context Study

The National Park Service (NPS) has received multiple requests to extend the comment period for the Great River Road Historic Context Study. In response to these requests, NPS is revising the comment period, which was originally opened from May 16, 2024, to June 30, 2024. There is now an additional opportunity to comment beginning July 16, 2024, and ending Friday August 30, 2024.

The purpose of the Great River Road Historic Context Study is to determine if preparation of a National Historic Landmark nomination is warranted. This study will not result in National Historic Landmark designation. NPS welcomes comments that will help HHM & Associates to evaluate the historic significance of the resources within the Great River Road corridor. Specifically, NPS is seeking input on the following questions:

1. The scope of work for this study did not include extensive fieldwork. Are you aware of any buildings, structures, or sites in the project area that the windshield and desktop survey missed? If so, please provide locations and any known information about the resource type and construction date.
2. Do you have any documentation about specific resources that could help supplement the preliminary desktop and windshield survey? Especially helpful information would include construction dates, major alteration dates, and/or historic photos of buildings.
3. While the resources included above are tangible, the values that inform the heritage throughout the study area are intangible. Does the study sufficiently recognize the area's traditional cultural practices? What else should be considered?
4. Do you agree with the study's findings? Why or why not?
